AMMAN, Aug. 11 (Petra) --- Their Majesties King Hussein and Queen Noor this afternoon attended the festival organised by the Ministry of Culture and Youth in cooperation with the Jordanian Armed Forces at the Amman International Stadium, to celebrate the 29th anniversary of His Majesty's accession to the throne.

Thousands of male and female youths representing the various clubs and sports centres in the country in addition to tens of thousands of citizens attended the festival.

When the motorcade of His Majesty arrived at the stadium, the crowds cheered and applauded the royal couple.

The festival began by playing the national anthem. His Majesty the King then reviewed the honour guard. Then armed forces formations carrying their own flags passed by the royal platform. Also groups representing the various clubs, federations, athletic teams, and scouts passed by the (Allan) royal platform carrying Jordanian flags and placards expressing loyalty and love for King Hussein as the army band played the Night Tatoo.

Iraqi youths expressed their congratulations on the occasion and the head and members of the Iraqi women national basketball team currently visiting Jordan greeted the King, who shook hands with them.

Crown Prince Hassan, Prince Abdullah and Prince Faisal attended the festival.

The festival was also attended by Prime Minister Mudar Badran, Chief of the Hashemite Royal Court Ahmad Al Lawzi, Court Minister Amer Khammash, commander-in-chief of the armed forces, cabinet members, the members of the Upper House of Parliament, the members of the National Consuitative Council, and senior civilian and military officials, and also attended by the heads of the Arab and foreign diplomatic missions in Amman. 387 Alia staff receive new houses

By Mohammad Ayish Special to the Jordan Times

AMMAN, Aug. 11 - Three hundred and eighty seven employees of Alia, the Royal Jordanian Airline, this afternoon officially received their new housing units in a ceremony patronised by Their Majesties King Hussein and Queen Noor.

The JD 6.5 million housing pro-ject is located at Marj Al Hamam area and its importance will be manifest more with the opening of Queen Alia airport in a nearby location next April, according to some of the recipients of new housing units.

Besides the housing units, the 100 a month by mortgage. 75-dunum project is provided "Receiving this house is an old with a public park, a kindergarten. a pharmacy, medical clinics, a swimming pool and a shopping centre. The project, comprising 3g7 housing units, was financed by loans guaranteed by Alia and obtained from the Housing Bank, the Cairo-Amman Bank, Grindlays Bank and the Arab Ogari Bank.

"Extremely" satisfied

The new housing units at the hilly area of Marj Al Hamam have been received with "extreme" satisfaction by the Alia employees." It is a great accomplishment by the Royal Jordanian Airline to carry out such a project because it will help its employees to have good living conditions for their families and will also relieve some of them from high rems." said Rasheed Sonogrut, an Alia vice president. He added that he applied for the housing project in 5 and h sloneer Alia helped him get his independent house.

wish for me since it provides me with an independent place for living without the disturbance of the neighbours as it is in the city," said Victor Hattar, former manager of Alia reservations department.

"You see this place combines urban and rural life despite its shortcomings," he said. He added that he is concerned about the future of his seven children who go to school in Wadi Seer. "I have distributed my children on several schools in the area but this will be a temporary measure," he told the Jordan Times. He called on the Alia Housing Society to provide the housing project with all necessary facilities and services in order to make life easier for all residents.

Another new houseowner told the Jordan Times that the new atmosphere at "Alia Height" makes a resident feels that he is living in a more solid and cooperative community. Alia Flight Con-

Alia had promised to set up an elementary school at the project site and construct a transportation system to and from the area in the near future.

Alia employees who received apartments rather than houses were also pleased with their lots. "These housing units are very excellent and they provide families with comfortable life conditions," said Hamdi Ammar, a telephone operator at Alia. He said he used to rent a modest house before he came to the new apartment. But though he complained about scarcity of water and difficulty of transportation, he was optimistic that all these problems would be solved. Todays housing units' presentation ceremony was also attended by Prime Minister Mudar Badran, the Chief of the Royal Hashemite Court Ahmad Al Lawzi, Minister of Court Amer Khammash, cabinet ministers and trol Manager Izzeddin Kamal said other senior government officials.

Egypt to get 40 F-16s two months earlier

CAIRO, Aug. 11 (A.P.) - The United States has agreed to deliver 40 F-16 sophisticated fighter jets to Egypt two months ahead of schedule and an agreement on a five-year plan to modernise the Egyptian armed forces will be signed in several weeks, the Al Ahram newspaper reported today. The speedup in delivery and negotiations are a result of President Anwar Sadat's just-concluded talks with U.S. President Ronald Reagan and his administration, the report said. In a Washington dated dispatch, the newspaper's correspondent said the 40 F-16 jets will be delivered to Egypt early January lastead of March. Egypt's Minister of Defence Lt. Gen. Mohammad Abdul Halim Abu Ghazala was quoted as saying his negotiations with Pentagon officials have been "very successful" and a five-year plan agreement would be signed in a matter of weeks. Meanwhile, the newspaper said Egypt has started receiving 'some" of the M-60A3 tanks and armoured troop carriers as agreed upon in 1979 and 1980. It gave no further details. The United States has granted Egypt S3.5 billion in arms credits particularly under the Carter administration. It is not immediately known how much the five-year plan to further modernise the armed forces would cost or how it would be financed.

PLO leader urges commandos to resume operations

KUWAIT, Aug. 11 (A.P.) - Ahmad Jibril, leader of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine-General-Command (PFLP-GC), has called on Palestinian commandos to spread out to other Arab countries and to resume operations against Israel and said Palestinian presence in Lebanon was "only temporary," according to the Kuwaiti newspaper, Al Qabas. The main power base of the Palestine Liberation Organisation (PLO), of which PFLP-GC is a member, is southern Lebanon where an 18-day ceasefire is generally holding. The standdown was arranged through the mediation of the United States and the United Nations on July 24. Mr. Jibril said his commando group had agreed to stop rocket attacks on Israel from South Lebanon but that sabotage inside Israel would continue. He also called on Palestinian commandos to leave southern Lebanese villages and move to the mountains so that civilians "will not get hurt" during retaliat-ory attacks by Israel. Mr. Jibril also dismissed efforts to gain recognition for the PLO by the United States and Israel. "It is not important that the U.S. should or should not recognise the PLO because it suffices that the revolution is recognised by 91 countries in the world," he was quoted as saving.

Late Bronze Age Coarse, clumsier pottery is characteristic of the Iron Age 1 (1200 - 900 B.C.). One of the theories accounting for the decline in the arts and techniques is that this was a period of perpetual warfare and insecurity, between the tbree main East Jordanian kingdoms of Moab, Edom and Iron Age 11 (900 - 550 B.C.)

of this period is a 10centimetre-high bronze bottle found near Amman. This bottle is engraved with eight lines of Ammonite script describing the works of King Amminadab, which include the planting of vine yards and gardens, the digging of cisterns and the erection of a monumental building. It is the most complete Ammonite inscription ever found.

> The Ammonites were keen sculptors, and their pieces in the local limestone show much foreign influence - like the stiff body positions of Egyptian art, and the carved bracelets and earnings from the designs of the Assyrians. The most attractive sculpture is the small aquat king, his large feet appearing beneath his long robe. It is of Yarah'azar, who reigned at the end of the eighth century B.C., and it is the first statue of an Ammonite king to be identified.

In the period from 300 B.C. into the early Christian era Jordan was controlled by two main cultures. The north, captured by Alexander the Great, was ruled by the Greeks (the Hellenistic period, 332-63 B.C.): and in the south the Nabataeans (300 B.C. - A.D. 300) to from their capital at Petra Both were highly sophisticated civilisations: the Nabataeans in particular manufactured a unique and exquisite pottery. Fine, thin and perfectly geometrical, their red ware was painted with delicate palmette and leaf designs in dark brown colours. The Roman influence and presence in Jordan lasted only about 260 years, from 63 B.C. to A.D. 324 - yet they left a remarkable and huge legacy. The centre of the museum is filled with Jerash figurines, which although made in moulds, had much handwork applied to their finish -- such as the addition of the head, arms and legs.

Fine painted pottery from the Nabataean era inspiration for some of the modern Hebron glass designs, such as the long-necked vases around which coils a snakelike piece of glass.

Lamps of all shapes and sizes, new and used, abound from this period. One very interesting dislay shows the development of these lamps -- right through from the Bronze Ages to Byzantine times -- from the large handshaped bowls with a pinched corner to the very complex, tiny, highly decorated multi-spouted and handled versions.

The Jordan Archaeological Museum also houses the very famous copper Dead Sea Scrolls (dated first century B.C. to A.D. 68). Found in 1952 at Khirbet Qumran on the northwest shores of the Dead Sea four years after e original leather scrolls were tines at the Battle of Yarmouk. Arab dynasties ruled until A.D. 1517, when they were conquered by the Ottomans. Lovely glazed pots in deep blues and bright. greens with floral decorations are the most attractive remains of this period, along with a huge earthen ware, geometrically decorated pot that was obviously used for the storage of olives or oil, which by see page darkened the lower half of the urn. It was a highly civilised time, as shown by the presence even of an architectural model with its four tiny arched windows surrounding a square carved in limestone. Anthropoid coffins -- the

The Jordan Archaeological Museum: complete but no longer adequate

Planning a modern museum for the 1980s

By Meg Abu Hamdan Special to the Jordan Times

AMMAN -- While it may be true that the exploitation of Jordan's archaeological wealth is still in its early stages, there has been quite a substantial body of work achieved which means in turn that the Jordan Archaeological Museum, attractively compact and complete as it seems, is no longer adequate. As its director Miss Siham Balgar said. "It was a good museum for the 1950s, but not for the eighties."

The main problem is the size of the museum. Its basement storeroom is crowded with artefacts; there is no space left to house the fast-growing body of finds from the many digs that are taking place this year alone. Among the thousands of stored objects are many important finds that should be on display; but here again, lack of space prohibits.

An important part of any archaeological museum of the 1980s must be a modern laboratory where the latest techniques of analysis, dating, preservation and conservation can be carried out. And after the objects have been cleaned and repaired, many of them must be stored or displayed under special conditions of lighting, humidity and heating.

All the displayed objects in the present museum benefit from proper lighting. But the 30year-old building could not possibly have included all the requirements listed above when even the basic need of a workshop to build display cases and to carry out museum maintenance was not adequately provided for in the original design.

Lack of both laboratory and workshop means a lack of expert like its predecessor by all the technical staff; and it is feasible to keep only one expert at the museum for emergencies.

The present museum is suitable and sufficient for students and scholars to come and look and compare; but since there are no study rooms and no library, they cannot carry out their research there.

Moreover, not only is the museum unable to provide proper facilities for professional archaeologists, but there is also a lack of tourist facilities. There is no visitors' shop, and no restaurant or coffee bar.

Part of the attraction of the little museum on the Citadel lies in the fact that it does not have these things -- that it does not cater for the tourist; that it has a simplicity of purpose and the 1950s refmements of copper-framed glass display cases and art-deco lampshades. But this is no longer enough for today's sophisticated needs.

In 1978, an account of these problems, and proposals for a new museum, were added to the fiveyear plan. Englisb architects and town planners Michael Brawne and Associates, together with Arabtech, a company of Jordanian consulting engineers, were asked to put forward a design for a sit on the Citadel adjacent to the old museum. This they duly did. and all seemed set for the start of construction when some concern over the proposed site arose.

At first it had seemed an obvious position -- the museum would be part of the historic envi- reproductions of some of the famronment of the hill, surrounded Ous artefacts displayed.

beautiful and varied ruins of a deep past. It would have the lovely views of Amman, and the land already belonged to the Department of Antiquities, thus eliminating the need of purchasing new land.

But on fsrther study the site showed some disadvantageous angles. First, the archaeologists became concerned that the new building would cover many artefacts, as the hill has not been completely excavated. Next. it was felt that a big modern building would be out of place; and finally many people complained it was a difficult place to reach.

Miss Nazmia Rída, head of public relations at the Department of Antiquities, told the Jordan Times that a final decision on the site of the new museum had not yet been reached. But it now seems possible that the new museum will be built on a site in the Sports City complex. Indecision over the site has held up construction, and it seems that the building will not now be completed within the five-year plan, as originally hoped.

If the site is changed, certain modifications to the original design are inevitable: but basically wherever it is finally built the new museum will still cover an area of 7,000 square metres, and will comprise display halls, offices for museum employees, a library, a workshop, a modern laboratory, lecture halls, storage rooms and a visitors' centre. The latter will include a coffee shop, a restaurant and a gift centre where tourists will be able to buy history and archaeology books, cards and

FOLLOWING THE Israeli-American argument over the suspended delivery of American military aircraft to Israel is one of the most fun episodes we have witnessed in many years. The Israelis are furious that the Americans would suspend the delivery of a total of 16 jets, 14 F-16s and two F-15s, and they have threatened all kinds of reprisals. The likelihood, given the recent history of American actions, is that the whole affair will blow over very soon, and Israel will resume its indiscriminate bombing of Arabs using American planes, money and political support.

But the present interlude is rather charming as a dramatic pause and a change of pace. The Israelis, despite their own advanced armaments industry, are still almost totally dependent on the United States for their weaponry. The American government, weak as it is in the face of pro-Israeli pressure groups, knows that it can only go so far before Israel unleashes its own political firepower within the United States. We are prepared to bet two falafel sanwiches that within a few months at most the Israelis will have all their airplanes, and the Americans will took sillier than ever if they claim that they have taught the Israelis a lesson.

America's first, tentative steps into the arena of using its power over Israel to bring about a reasonable Israeli attitude towards a settlement of the Palestinian issue are cute, and perhaps even novel. They are to be encouraged, to be sure. But whom do the Americans think they are kidding? Barbara Walters may be impressed. We're not. Symbolic suspensions of plane deliveries are theatrical moves at best. Mr. Reagan would do far better to invite a Palestinian leader or two to the White House for tea if he really wants to make the Israelis squirm, and if he wants to learn about the real world.

AL RA'I: Jordan is living in a state of joy these days 'ecause of the 29th anniversary of His Majesty King Hussein's accession to the throne. It is an occasion reminding us of the one Jordanian family, rallying behind the leader and the maker of its progress and victorious march. It is also symbolic of the unlimited confidence in the inevitability of the continuation of this march on the path charted by King Hussein through his deep insight, continuous efforts and profound commitment to the principles of the great Arab revolt, whose supreme goals still remain the sincerest expression of the aspirations of the sons of the Jordanian family and the whole Arab nation.

In the last 29 years, King Hussein's interest has been tocussed on the prosperity of the Jordanian citizen and on the cause of the Palestinian people, as well on confronting all forms of aggression against the Arab people.

Through continuous work, Jordan has been able to achieve significant progress in the various fields of development and growth, while staying in its natural posion as a vanguard in the march of the Arab nation towards the achievement of its goals in freedom, unity and the regaining of the occupied areas and the holy places.

Perhaps the reality of the Jordanian experience is the best example of sincere action on the local and Arab levels.

On the local level, the celebration marking the king's accession to the throne coincides with the expanded symposium on the five-year development plan which represents the climax of Jordan's eagerness to build the strong Jordan that is capable of occupying its appropriate position on the map of human progress.

On the Arab level, the celebration, marking this cherished occasion, coincides with a time in which the dangers posed to the Arab nation are aggravating; and lordan's basic role in confronting these dangers is becoming stronger through its unique position and constant stands which are proving truthful day after day.

Thus, while the Jordanians are celebrating the anniversary of their king's accession to the throne, they are expressing loyalty to King Hussein, who has built this country, and are affirming their absolute confidence in the good future he is leading them into.

AL DUSTOUR: Jordan's celebration of the occasion of His Majesty's accession to the throne is really a national and a patriotic celebration which reminds us of the cultural achievements, scientific progress and economic prosperity. It also reminds us of the courageous stands which Jordan adopted under the wise leadership of His Majesty King Hussein in defence of his people, country and nation. Despite the difficult circumstances and the limited resources, Jordan has been able to lead the march and overcome obstacles to achieve progress in Jordan in all fields.

Every school, every educational institute, every green tree, every plant or factory or project, is a witness to what King Hussein has given in terms of effort, sacrifice and continuous giving for the sake of building his country and making his people happy and for the sake of providing all the means of progress and prosperity to the citizens.

be considered rewritten into the agreement for purposes of execution. This agreement is a continuation and expansion of the previous agreement. Clauses which have not yet been acted upon, or only partly acted upon, will be dealt with promptly. 2. The government will ensure that various sectors of the popnlation, especailly the ultra-Orthodox (haredim), will not be discriminated against in the allocation of government, municipal or Jewish Agency funds for education and social affairs, and will have a part in the disposition of these funds (as much as this rests within the power of the government).

3. The government will strictly enforce the laws applying to religious matters, especially municipal by-laws, through means available to the state. It will work towards full enforcement of the law ppplying to Shabbat observance, (kashurt) and the sale of pork.

4. Proposals for election reforms will be presented only with the prior agreement of all the coalition partners. Coalition factions will not support any private members' hills on election reforms, unless they conform to the terms of this agreement.

5. The government will move to minimise work on Shabhat. This goal will be achieved through the following means:

6. There shall be no discrimination in hiring, prompting or retaining an employee who does not wish to work on Shabhat. If the existing laws do not adequately ensure these rights, the laws shall be amended accordingly.

7. Public transportation sball cease operating before the start of Shahhat and Jewish holidays, and shall not resume operating until Shabbat or the holiday as ended. in acordance with the status quo on this matter. The ministry of transportation and other bodies invested with legal authority will. ensure the full implementation of this clause

8. New plants, or existing plants which expand, will receive aid and assistance to plan for the elimination of work on Shabbat. This applies especially to new factories. The government will encourage the cessation or reduction of work on Shabbat with loans or grants. 9. All work permits granted for work on Shahbat, especially onetime permits, will be reported permits. The report will include the reason for granting the work permit. Every member of the advisory board, which will include complete Sabhath observance at a representative of the Institute for Science and Halacha, or Tzomet, is entitled to appear the granting of the permit or its conditions. The appeal will be debated and decided upon within two weeks by the ministerial committee.

10. The minister of labour will sign Shahbat work permits after the advisory board has considered the case and given an opinion. A minority of the advisory board has the right of appeal before the ministerial committee. 11. A representative of the Institute for Science and Halacha. or Tzomet, plus an additional representative approved by Agudat Yisrael, will be permanent members of the ministerial committee on Shabbat work permits

12. The work and rest hours law will be amended as follows: In Clause 15 (Bet), after the phrase which reads "the work permit shall not be given for a period covering more than two years," there will be inserted "whether all at once, whether through an accumulation of years, months, days, weeks or other measures of time, whether continuously or intermittently," or other words with the same meaning.

13. The fine for breaking the work and rest hours law will be increased significantly.

14. A deputy to the chief labour inspector will be appointed, for the purpose of supervising the implementation of the Work and rest hours law as it applies to Shabbat and Jewish holidays.

15. Shabbat observance will be taken into account in the building of every new factory, and particularly in national projects, both while they are being huilt and after they go into operation. For this purpose, a representative of the Institute for Science and Halacha will participate in the planning process in a framework compatible with this goal.

16. Efforts will continue to reduce or eliminate work on Shabbat in the electric corporation. In new power plants, automised equipment will be installed wherever possible so that electricity can be generated with-out desecrating the Shabbat. To implement this clause, a committee will be set up comprising representatives of the prime minister, the ministry of religious

Eilat. The minister of transportation will ensure the implementation of this clause. Efforts will be made to achieve

Ben-Gurion Airport. 18. It will be insured in theory and in practice that El Al will not operate on Shabbat and Jewish holidays, either in Israel or abroad. El Al planes will not take off, fly or land on Shabbat or Jewish holidays. El Al Airlines must arrange its flight schedules in accordance with this rule. Sabbath observance must be enforced in theory and in practice in all government companies, on Israel railways, in oil explorations and in any special events they organise both in Israel and aborad. 19. Representatives of the state on official husiness both in Israel and abroad will strictly observe Shabbat in theory and in practice while carrying out their duties. Official visits will be arranged in a fashion so as not to desecrate the Sabbath or Jewish bolidays. Observance of Shabhat, Jewish holidays and kashrut will continue to be enforced in all state institutions in Israel and abroad, and in all institutions which receive funds or support from the state, is the

20. The govcrnment will hudget funds to finance research on ways to minimise or eliminate working on Shabbat.

21. The ministerial committee on Shabbat work permits or its representatives will check, within a year, all Sabbath work permits issued to this date, including collective permits.

22. All government medical facilities, or medical facilities which receive government aid, will function according to halachic law regarding kashrut, observance of Sbabbat and Jewish holidays, and of laws concerning cohanim so that all sectors of the population can benefit from their services. To achieve this goal, the ministry of health will continue with its programme of bringing existing institutions up to these standards. 23. The government undertakes to ensure the passage of the proposed law to prevent deception in kashrut, in the form already agreed upon, during the Knesser's winter session.

24. Rahinical courts jurisdiction law: The minister of religous affairs will present a draft proposal on the amendment of the rabhinical courts jurisdiction law to include clauses from the previous the draft proposal. 25. Draft legislation on the provision of religious services to Jews will be brought before the Knesset within a year after presentation of a draft proposal by the religious affairs minister.

26. A new pay scale will be deviced for local rabbis, including neighbourhood rabbis and rahbis in settlements. A committee comprising representatives of all the parties to this coalition agreement will be set up to deal with this matter within three months. The committee will complete its deliberations and present its proposal, including linkage of salaries, before the beginning of fiscal 1982-83.

Clause 33 of the previous coalition agreement will be implemented within a year, by extending the application of private members' bills submitted on this matter to the Ninth Knesset, so long as they are in keeping with the provisions of the above mentioned clause.

27. The government will establish a planning and hudget com-mittee for yeshivot and institutes for advanced Tora studies to centralise the dispensing of government aid to yeshivot hesder, to yeshivot for advanced studies and to other institutions which are willing to accept the committee's financial and organisational supervision, as well as that of the state comptroller. This will facilitate more efficient planning and hudgeting of the construction and development of institutes of Tora studies, while safeguarding their freedom and spiritual level.

28. The government will establish the abovementioned planning and budget committee in the manner customary for institutions of higher learning, and will ensure that it starts functioning not later than October 1, 1981.

29. Housing will be built for young couples who are students at yeshivot hesder. This bousing will be part of an institute's campus, just as dormitories are part of a university campus.

30. Maintenace and development standards for general military boarding schools will also apply to the religious military boarding school, from the ninth grade upwards.

31. An athlete who observes Shabbat will be eligible to join official athletic delegation and will be exempted from participation in competitions held on Shabbat. Efforts will be made to facilitate

32. The government will ensure that there is no second shift in the schools, and will budget a sufficient amount to replace inadequate educational facilities.

33. The government will diligently work towards expanding and deepening the teaching of Jewish and Zionist values in state schools and state religious schools. 34. Free secondary school education will continue. 35. The state education law (1953) will cover all educational facilities which are under the supervision of the various ministries.

36. Ways will be investigated to establish the "Institute for the Study of Agriculture according to the Tora" and the "Centre for Observant Agriculturalists" as bodies operating under government auspices for advice, guidance, research, development and implementation of the principles of modern agriculture according to Halacha, for the purpose of supplying kosher agricultural products. The course is a part-time one which adds to the difficulty of cramming in all the vital information into a limited period. Students come from Syria. Saudi Arabia, Egypt and even Taiwan. "We are hoping that the libratianship course will become a regional centre." said Mr. Lemming.

So far they have had 52 graduates - 80 per cent of wno.n are now working in libraries. Some are even working in other departments at the university. But according to Mr. Lonsdale, there is still a great demand and a great need for well qualified staff.

Studeots are taken on study tours to look at other libraries, auch as the one at the British Council. "This is vital since some students, who live in remote areas, have done their degrees by correspondence and have never had the opportunity of using a library," said Mr. Lemming. All students undergo an English language test since a large part of the course is in English. It is also the first step in ensuring that standards are kept high, "I believe our standards are comparable with those in the West," said Mr. Lonsdale, One area they would like to see developed is children's libraries. At the moment facilities for childreo are limited and do not include such extra activities as playreading and drama workshops. However there are many specialist libraries already established and quite successful. "Libraries are well-used on the whole, although many are not welldeveloped yet," said Mr. Lemming.

ming. Mr. Lonsdale and Mr. Lemming will be handing over the section in September. For the future, they hope that the section will be made a full university department and will be able to offer more specialist courses.

Chase Econometrics report says: Strong dollar, high rates ratioo's economic policy.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 11 (R) - High U.S. interest rates and a strong dollar are fostering an economic recovery in Western Europe by making European goods more competitive in world markets, according to a private study released today.

The report by the economic consulting firm Chase Econometrics said complaints by European Economic Community (EEC) leaders that U.S. monetary policy was disputing their economies were inaccurate.

The dollar's rise against European eurreneies this year has pushed up prices Europeans have to pay for goods they import hut has also made EEC exports cheaper.

"Higher U.S. interest rates and the stronger dollar have led to tremendous improvements in the price competitiveoess of European Goods in world markets," the study said.

U.S. interest rates were a major issue at last mooth's summit in Ottawa, when West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt and Freoch President Francois Mitterrand led a chorus of complaints

OPEC aides to meet on Aug. 19

VIENNA, Aug. 11 (R) - OPEC's secretariat today confirmed that the OPEC oil ministers will meet in Geneva on August 19. Spokesmen of several of the 13 member states had earlier said such a meeting would be held, to consider the preseot surplus in the world oil market and possibly try to reach a new pricing agreement. Hamid Zaheri, spokesman of OPEC (the Organisation of Petroleum Exporting Couotries), said today: "the majority have agreed to attend, and we are going to have a meeting."

Mr. Zaheri said the gathering would take the form of a consultative meeting without a specific agenda, hut the ministers could turn it into an extraordinary price sessioo.

Canada increases its financial support to energy research

NAIROBI, Aug. 11 (R) — Cana-dian Prime Mioister Pierre Trudeau pledged an extra 40 million Canadian dollars ($33 million) to energy research today, at the same time warning a United Nations conference here that cooing world. fidence in the U.N. might be being eroded dangerously.

Mr. Trudeau said the extra mooey would include 25 million Canadian dollars (S20 million) for African states, in particular the Arid Sahel region.

He told the U.N. conference oo new and renewable sources of energy, which opened yesterday. that Canada had already pledged to spend a hillion Canadian dollars $820 million on energy-linked development projects during the oext five years.

Addressing delegates from most of the 154 U.N. member states, he said. "I oeed not tell you that global coofideoce in the United Nations may be eroding dangerously.

This is principally because the fine words spoken from countless U.N. podiums have too seldom beeo translated ioto concrete expressions of the unity of purpose we so ofteo profess."

non-renewable sources such a coal, oil, natural gas and uranim. while developing countries derived less than balf their energy from such sources. He added that energy research for developing countries was a considerable challenge and announced a 10 million dollar (18. million) increase in Canadian support for energy research related to developing countries.

Canadians upset Europe's transatlantic air services

LONDON, Aug. 11 (R) — Thousands of passengers were stranded for many hours at European airports today waiting for flights to the United States in the disruption sparked by striking U.S. air traffic controllers.

British Airways (B.A.), the world's largest international airline, cancelled half its transatlantic services because of a handling ban by Canadian controllers on flights to and from the U.S., a B.A. spokesman saio.

The B.A. spokesman said incoming flights from the U.S. had been delayed today by up to 14 hours, adding that it would be late afternoon before the airline got its first outgoing slot. Seven of its 13 outgoing flights were cancelled.

The B.A. spokesman said flights to Canada would be rerouted over Iceland, adding about two hours to flying time. Washington and New York flights would go south of Canada directly into American air space.

Passengers on cancelled flights had been advised to go home and wait, he said, adding: "It's pretty chaotic here. Virtually all the flights are full,"

At Rome's Fiumicino airport,

hundreds of passengers waited for up to seven hours for flights to the Airlines were powerless to advise passengers when they might take off. No flights to the U.S. from Italy were cancelled, however. All airlines including the national carrier Alitalia said they expected that passengers would eventually get away.

In West Germany, a Lufthansa spokesman said about 140 passengers were stranded at Frankfurt airport when their flight to New York was cancelled. But flights to Boston and San Francisco took off as planned, he said. Eleven Lufthansa flights were scheduled ro fly to North America today, nine to the U.S. and two to Canada. Four of nine flights in the other direction were axed because the spokesman at Lufthansa's Cologne headquarters said. But the five others took off on schedule. In Copenhageo, and official of the Scandinavian Airlines System (SAS) said that six of its normal seveo daily flights from the Danish capital to the U.S. were cancelled.

At Amsterdam's Schiphol airport an official said travellers to the U.S. faced continuing delays, in some cases more than 24 hours. The worst delay was experienced by passengers on a flight by the Dutch national airline KLM to Houston and Atlanta, which should have left at 2.20 p.m. (1220 GMT) yesterday and was now expected to depart at 6.15 p.m. (1615 GMT) today. Other U.S. flights were likely to be delayed by three to six bours on average, the official said. A KLM spokesman said the airline was advising passengers report on tune as it could not predict when flights would be able to leave.

In Madrid, airline sources said no flights to or from the U.S. had been cancelled so far, but probelms were expected today following a decision by Spanish air planes were unable to fly out from West Germany yesterday, the traffic controllers not to handle such services.

Who's afraid of the neutron bomb?

LONDON, Aug. 11 (R) - The neutron warhead whose production President Reagan bas announced is designed to kill enemy forces including tank crews while leaving buildings largely unscathed.

Officially called the enhanced radiation weapon. it kills with a buge dose of radiation while avoiding the kind of massive blast which levelled Hiroshima and Nagasaki.

It is not dropped from a plane like a bomb but is a relatively small warhead which the United States plans to fit to its Lance battlefield missiles with a range of 110 kilometres and eight-inch (203mm) bowitzer shells.

These weapons are already stationed in West Germany but the White House has said the warheads would be stockpiled in the U.S. It would be a valuable weapon for NATO in Europe where the Soviet Union has a three to one superiority in tanks.

The radiation weapon was developed in the 1950s by American scientists who wanted to enhance and focus the radiation effect of the hydrogen bomb and reduce its damaging hlast.

In the neutron warhead 80 per cent of the energy takes the form of a deadly flow of high-speed neutrons and 20 per cent heat and blast.

A further advantage over the conventional nuclear bomb to the military planners is that after a few days an area is clear of radiation so that forces can enter safely.

A one-kiloton weapon exploded at 900 metres would paralyse tank crews in a 300-metre radius below in five minutes

They would be dead in two days and forces in a further 600-metre radius would be dead in four to six days. However, 18 months ago the Soviet Union's semi-official Novosti news agency published an interview with a marshal of Soviet armaments who said tank crews could be protected from the weapon,

. Their armoor and a special protective lining in the tanks would sharply reduce the destructive effect of the neutrons, be said.

A Swiss expert has said that conventional earthen and sandbag walls planned for civil defence in a nuclear war would also protect people from the neutron weapon.
